ExcellenSeas Bids Farewell to George Provopoulos

With great sadness, the ExcellenSeas team bids farewell to George Provopoulos, President of its Scientific Council, who passed away at the age of 74 after battling cancer.

From the very beginning, Mr. Provopoulos was a staunch supporter of the vision to establish ExcellenSeas, a non-profit organization dedicated to rewarding outstanding students from Greece's remote islands through scholarship programs. His commitment was instrumental in both the creation and the successful implementation of the program.

Mr. Provopoulos played a pivotal role in forming the Scientific Council, which is composed of distinguished professors from Greek and international universities, as well as individuals of exceptional academic caliber and ethical standing. His precise and insightful guidance greatly contributed to the success of ExcellenSeas and its initiatives.

"Beyond his crucial role in the economic life of the country, George Provopoulos decisively contributed to establishing our organization as a beacon of social solidarity and excellence. An eternal 'thank you' from the entire ExcellenSeas family will accompany him on his solitary journey. He will undoubtedly be deeply missed," stated Dr. Evgenia Giannini, President of ExcellenSeas.

The Board of Directors unanimously decided to:

1. Attend his funeral as a body and lay a wreath in his honor.
2. Name all future scholarships awarded to students in Economics-related fields as the "George Provopoulos Scholarships."

The ExcellenSeas team extends heartfelt condolences to his wife Evdokia, his children Nasos, Theodora, and Marietta, as well as his grandchildren
