PRESS RELEASE

EYDAP Continues to Support ExcellenSeas, Investing in the Future of University Students from Greece's Remote Islands

EYDAP S.A. continues to stand alongside ExcellenSeas, making a meaningful contribution to the programme's mission of providing equal educational opportunities to young people from Greece's remote islands.

EYDAP's sponsorship supports Evelina Daikou, from Astypalaia, a student at the Department of Special Education at the University of Thessaly. It is worth noting that EYDAP has also supported another student from Astypalaia in the past, throughout the entire duration of his studies, reaffirming its long-standing commitment to expanding educational opportunities for young people from Greece's remote islands.

EYDAP is supporting ExcellenSeas for the fifth consecutive year, demonstrating the company's continued commitment to initiatives with a meaningful social and educational impact. Through its ongoing support for young people from Greece's small and remote islands, EYDAP helps create opportunities for their academic and professional development.

The ExcellenSeas Scholarship programme is an innovative initiative of the Pastra Cretonaxiosa swimming team. Established in 2018, it aims to support university students from Greece's remote islands. With the valuable assistance of companies such as EYDAP, the programme has supported 60 students to date, originating from islands including Donousa, Astypalaia, Kastellorizo, Meganisi, Agios Efstratios, Nisyros, Halki, Psara, Amorgos, Kasos, Lipsi, Samothrace, Fournoi, and others. Its activities extend beyond financial assistance to include academic mentoring, internship opportunities, and ongoing support for scholarship recipients throughout their studies.

In addition to providing scholarships, ExcellenSeas organises annual long-distance swimming events in Greece's remote island regions, aiming to raise public awareness of the educational challenges faced by young people in these communities. These events, which in previous years have been held under the auspices of the Presidency of the Hellenic Republic, have become an established tradition, highlighting the importance of equal access to education. Through these initiatives, the programme strengthens its ties with local communities and maintains open channels of communication with the wider public.

EYDAP's continued contribution provides meaningful support to ExcellenSeas, highlighting the importance of businesses actively supporting social initiatives that aim to create equal opportunities for the next generation.

About EYDAP

The Athens Water Supply and Sewerage Company (EYDAP) is the largest water supply and sewerage company in Greece. Since its establishment in 1980, it has grown to serve more than 4.4 million people through its water supply services and 3.5 million people through its sewerage services, operating a network extending over 23,000 kilometres.

EYDAP undertakes infrastructure projects and provides high-quality services, including wastewater treatment, desalination, digital water monitoring, water resource protection, and the promotion of sustainable water management. As part of its Corporate Social Responsibility strategy, the company consistently supports social initiatives and educational programmes, actively contributing to social cohesion.

For more information, please visit:

www.excellenseas.org

www.eydap.gr